A court just sent staff back to the office.

An Amsterdam court backed Booking.com: at least 40% of working time on site. Today only 27% of staff meet it.

A rule fills desks. What fills the office?

Gabriele Maffezzini
Project & Development, EMEA

Source: Allwork.Space, 28 Oct 2026 (Amsterdam court ruling)

Rules go up. Attendance lags.

The same week, ORGATEC in Cologne chose its first ever theme: "From rooms to relationships".

40%
of working time on site, the new Booking.com rule

27%
of its staff meet that bar today

51-60%
typical office occupancy across occupiers

~40%
of occupiers require 2 to 3 office days a week

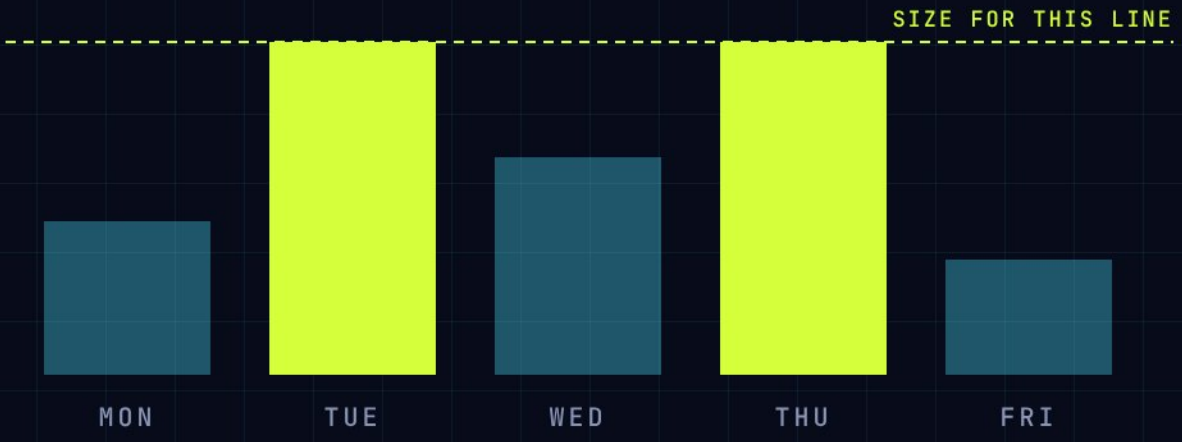

Gabriele Maffezzini
Project & Development, EMEA

Sources: Allwork.Space, Oct 2026; Cushman & Wakefield occupier survey, 2025

Tuesday and Thursday decide the floor plan.

The court also ruled that every employee who comes in must find a place to sit. Average occupancy is no longer the design brief.

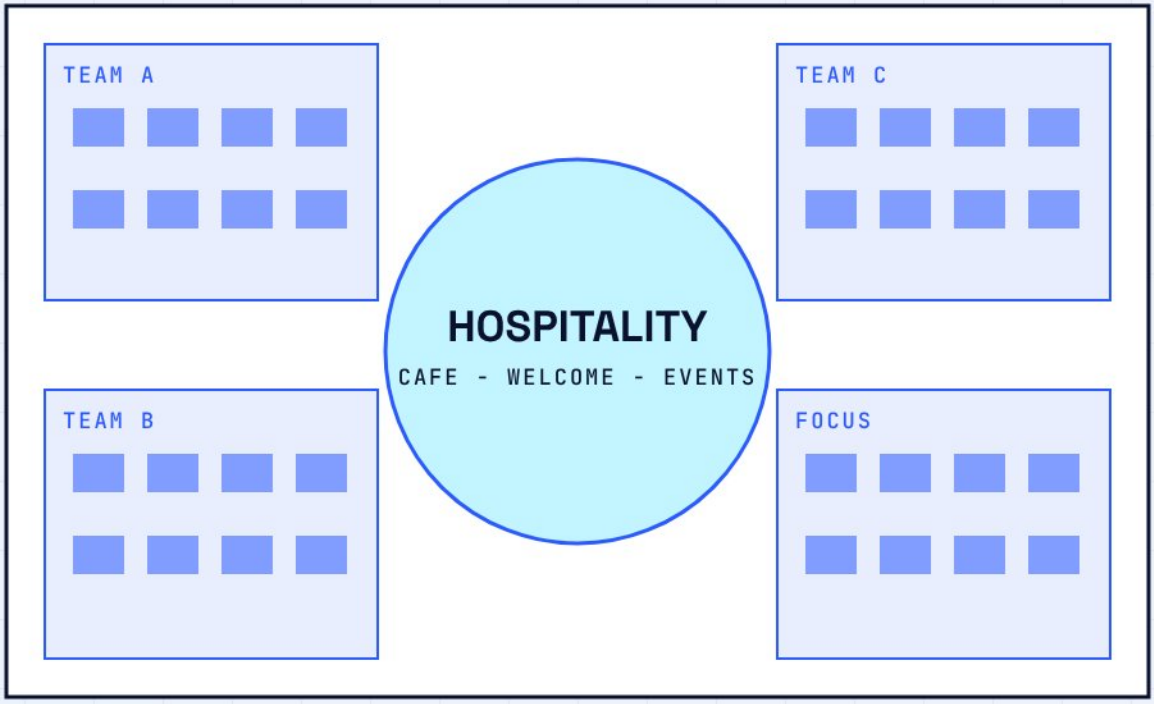

Gabriele Maffezzini
Project & Development, EMEA

Illustrative weekly attendance profile

From rooms to relationships.

85%

of tenants want more from their landlord: services, amenities, events

46%

would pay a premium for it

Gabriele Maffezzini
Project & Development, EMEA

Source: Cushman & Wakefield occupier survey, 2025

The space you need in 2028 is being decided now.

3.3%
Grade A vacancy in Europe

2014
development pipeline at its lowest since then

-19%
pipeline, year on year, to 8.4m sq m

+10.4%
prime rent growth in Milan in a year

Gabriele Maffezzini
Project & Development, EMEA

Source: Cushman & Wakefield, European office market update, Sep 2026

Mandates bring people in. Places make them stay.

Peak
sized for the busiest day

Host
hospitality at the core

Early
secure quality space ahead

Will mandates bring people back, or will better offices?

Tell me what your company does.

Gabriele Maffezzini
Project & Development, EMEA